Funding body:	BirdLife International
Maximum value:	£ 15,000
Application deadline:	10/10/2023

Who Can Apply

Applications are accepted from teams initiating projects which meet the project eligibility criteria.

Eligibility Criteria

For the team:

- CLP Awards are for team-based conservation projects – each team must have at least three people
 - 50% or more of the team members must be nationals of the country where the project is taking place
 - The team leader must be a national of the country where the project is taking place. Co-leadership with a non-national will be considered, subject to clear justification
 - All team members must be early-career conservationists with no more than five years of paid work experience in the conservation sector. 'Paid work experience' does not include research for a university degree. Individuals who have more than five years of paid work experience in the conservation sector are not eligible for CLP support and should not apply
 - No team member can be a part- or full-time paid employee or contractor with a CLP partner organisation, including BirdLife International, Fauna & Flora International and the Wildlife Conservation Society, at any time from project development through to implementation
 - Any team member volunteering at a CLP partner organisation at the time of application and/or project implementation MUST be declared in the application. They also need to explain how the CLP proposal differs from the partner organisation's work
 - Applicants can participate in only one CLP project at a time and in no more than three Future Conservationist Award projects in total, serving as team leader for no more than one Future Conservationist project.

For the Project:

- The total funding request from CLP must not exceed US $15,000 and CLP funding must cover at least 50% of the total project budget
- The project must focus on globally important species for biodiversity conservation that are at risk. We consider a species to be 'at risk' if it is designated as globally threatened (CR, EN, VU) or data deficient (DD) by the IUCN Red List OR if there is information suggesting that urgent conservation action is needed
- For those projects focusing on multiple species and/or taxonomic groups, at least one species in each taxonomic group being studied must be at risk
- The project must be for new work rather than the continuation of an ongoing, established project
- Applicants must demonstrate that the proposed project goes beyond academic research being carried out for any team member's degree
- Projects that involve laboratory analyses must justify why this work is critical and urgent for conservation
- The proposal must be written by the applicants themselves.

UK Woodland Carbon Code (WCC)

Status:	Open for Applications
---------	-----------------------

The Woodland Carbon Code sets out robust requirements for voluntary carbon sequestration projects that incorporate core principles of good carbon management as part of modern sustainable forest management.

Fund Information

Funding body:	Forestry Commission
Maximum value:	Discretionary
Application deadline:	None specified

Who Can Apply

The Woodland Carbon Code can benefit a range of organisations seeking to establish and invest in woodland creation projects for carbon sequestration, including:

- Businesses - WCC projects create real and verifiable carbon units which can be bought and used by businesses wishing to reduce their impact on the global climate and cost-effectively compensate for their emissions. As a business manager, businesses will only want to buy units from carbon-capture projects if they feel confident that the woodlands will be well managed and will capture the CO2 claimed. Verification against the Woodland Carbon Code meets this need by providing the evidence. Businesses can also be reassured that they can track the purchase, ownership and use of credits on a highly respected registry.
- Landowners - Landowners seeking to create woodland or partner with an organisation to create woodland can identify potential partners and investors.
- Carbon companies - involved in carbon sequestration can use the Woodland Carbon Code to reassure investors and identify high standard projects that are fit for investment.
